Green Century believes that even corporate sustainability leaders have room for improvement, which is why we pressure dozens of companies every year to adopt stronger environmental practices and policies throughout their operations and supply chains.

Shareholder Advocacy

The shareholder advocacy programs of many mutual fund companies consist solely of proxy voting or analyst conversations. Not Green Century.

While Green Century votes its proxies to support more sustainable corporate practices and reduce potential investment risks, Green Century’s in-depth shareholder advocacy program goes well beyond proxy voting to deliver tangible results. Green Century pressures companies to adopt environmentally sustainable policies through direct engagement, global collaborations, and as a leader of investor groups.

Every year, Green Century also files numerous shareholder proposals, which are formal requests that a company take a specific action based on a business case. Green Century’s shareholder proposals cover issues including tropical forest protection, clean energy, antibiotic misuse, and plant-based protein.

Green Century has engaged more than 200 companies on a variety of issues and has played an instrumental role in countless environmental successes.
