

Green Century<sup>o</sup> is a unique mutual fund company in the United States wholly owned by environmental and public health nonprofit organizations. 100% of the profits earned from managing the Green Century Funds belong to these organizations to support their critical work.

Nonprofit Ownership

More than 30 years ago, a group of environmental leaders founded Green Century to provide a way for people who care about the planet to save for their future without compromising their values.

Today, every dollar Green Century earns managing its Funds supports those nonprofit organizations and their work to protect the environment and public health and enact positive public policy.

As the first family of fossil fuel free, environmentally responsible, and diversified mutual funds in the U.S., few mutual funds can match Green Century's approach.

Even fewer offer an award-winning shareholder advocacy program.

Other mutual fund companies don't offer investors the opportunity to make an environmental impact through its ownership, which makes Green Century truly one of a kind.

Green Century has provided financial support for numerous environmental and public health campaigns carried out by its nonprofit owners and partners.

Colorado Public Interest Research Group (COPIRG) advocate Rex Wilmouth (l) celebrate with Gov. Jared Polis and volunteers after signing of the 'producer responsibility' law to reduce packaging waste. The measure will require companies to pay for their products' packaging and use the revenue to expand curbside recycling programs across the state.

COPIRG is one of Green Century's non-profit founders and owners.

The 100% Renewable Energy Campaign helped convince 10 states including California, Hawaii, New Mexico, Washington, New York, Maine, Virginia, and most recently, Rhode Island to adopt plans to achieve 100% renewable electricity.

The Wildlife Over Waste Campaign, which aims to protect our oceans and marine life, including sea turtles and other endangered species, from plastic pollution, helped convince Maine, Maryland, Vermont, and Oregon to ban polystyrene.

With clothing piling up in landfills around the country faster than any other type of trash we throw away, this problem is too big to ignore. The Waste is Out of Fashion Campaign is working to get clothing manufacturers and retailers to stop producing more clothing than we can wear and to prevent the incineration or landfilling of overstock.

The Stop the Overuse of Antibiotics Campaign is pushing to ensure that McDonald's,* the largest purchaser of beef in the world, honors its commitment to restrict the use of antibiotics in its beef and chicken supply chains.

No Bees, No Food is working to restore bee populations to health and save our food supply by working to ban the sale of bee-killing pesticides for our homes, parks and gardens in 21 states around the country.

Electric Buses for America scored a victory when the Environmental Protection Agency announced a $5B program that will replace polluting diesel buses with clean electric ones.
